Broom's Bloom Dairy is an interesting mix of ancestral history and new beginnings. The name originates from the colonial land grant for the area along with the original owner of the land, John Broom. The "Bloom" refers to crops flourishing and providing for the tenants, hence the name "Broom's Bloom Dairy."

The farm and house date back to 1726 and is supporting its 9th generation of the Dallam family. David and Kate Dallam started milking 65 cows on the farm. Now the dairy farm has a small café and grocery specializing in their own homemade ice cream, cheeses, milk, and other dairy products. They also sell products from other local farms, including beef, pork, turkey, chicken, eggs, and more.
